A HOTEL GHOST.

House was to be closed, which was denied, however, there is a story that Lady Durnaven has been known to tell about the famous old lim, says the New York Tribune. The countess is described by those who know her as a woman much more inclined to common score than to ghost handed to common to see than to ghost handed to common has been with the facts in the talesimply for what they were worth.

It was more than one decade ago, years before the Valkyrie was thought of, when Lord Durnaven was first interested in the mining regions of northern Michigan. He and Lady Bunraven were staying in New York for a few days before starting west and had takes from a the Brevoort picas and bad takes from a table Brevoort picas and brooms, with a view of the avenue and a nice glimpee of Washington square. The first might, being tired with their voyage, they went early to bed, but, as it happened, not so early to sleep. Both the earl and the countest were highest and the countest when highest and the countest were highest and the countest when highest and the countest and the fail of the fail of the fail of

The explanation of the mystery, if it was an explanation, came out by chance. They had a call before long from an old-time New Yorker whom they had met in England, en authority on all matters pertaining to the hown's manor history. "I wonder," he re-marked casually, "that they have given you these rooms. You know it was in that room there, not so long ago, that a Mr. X— hanged himself," It was in that room that Lord and Lady Dunraven had tried in vain to sleep, and they exchanged signifi-cant glances. Of course, it was only a co-incidence, they said: but the next day
